Rawlins Piano Trio to perform benefit concerts

The University of South Dakota Rawlins Piano Trio will present two concerts this month to benefit the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society. The performances will feature works by Schubert, Ravel and Lili Boulanger.

The first concert is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, April 22, in Colton Recital Hall in the Warren M. Lee Center for the Fine Arts on the USD campus. The Trio will play again at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 23 at the Belbas Hall located inside Washington Pavilion of Art and Science in Sioux Falls. Admission is free, however audience members are asked to make a donation to help the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society.

Since its founding in 1987, the Rawlins Piano Trio has distinguished itself as a dynamic group of performers, teachers and scholars. The ensemble performs regularly throughout the United States and abroad, including recent concert and teaching tours throughout Taiwan and Panama, and a May 2013 visit to South Korea. Owing to its expertise as a preeminent interpreter of American music, the ensemble has recorded four CDs on the Albany Records label. The fourth disc, “American Discoveries” was released in July 2009. It presents the Trio’s first commissioned composition, “Volvic Maritim,” by New York-based composer Daniel Bernard Roumain. The Trio recorded a fifth CD on the Azica label in June of 2012.

Commissioned works by Emma Lou Diemer, James Lentini, Timothy Hoekman, Miguel Roig-Francoli and Stephen Yarbrough are featured. The CD will be released in 2013.

The Trio is named for benefactors Marjorie Rawlins and the late Robert Rawlins. All artists are faculty members in the USD Department of Music. For more information, see the Trio’s Web site at www.rawlinstrio.com or call the USD College of Fine Arts at (605) 677-5481.

USD Orchestra combines with USD Choirs

Camille Saint-Saëns’s witty “Carnival of the Animals” will highlight the free concert of the USD Symphony Orchestra on Friday, April 26, at 7:30 p.m. in Aalfs Auditorium in Slagle Hall.

The famous French composer, who was head of the Paris Conservatory when he wrote it, has everything, from turtles dancing the can-can to donkeys braying. USD Theatre Department professor Matt Nesmith will narrate poems written by Ogden Nash to accompany the work.

The concert will also include performances by the winners of this year’s concerto competition, Kelly Coslet, viola, and Amanda Rich, soprano. The concert will conclude with four American folk hymns arranged by Mack Wilberg for chorus and large orchestra. The USD Chamber Singers and Men’s and Women’s Chorus will form a choir of more than 100 for this annual collaboration.

This event is partially sponsored by a generous donation from the First Bank and Trust.

“Would those be allowed ... if it’s not to be consumed on school property, if it’s still wrapped in its package, would it still be allowed in the school?” Stammer asked. “I want it (the policy) to be safe, but at the same time, I don’t want it to change everything that we do and think.”

Johnson admitted that the scenario Stammer introduced would need further scrutiny.

School board member Shannon Fairholm noted that steps are already being taken, including the following of certain protocols, to try to eliminate allergen problems at Austin Elementary.

“Why do you feel that that is not currently working?” she asked Johnson.

“Currently, it is working, in that we haven’t had any exposure or allergic reactions,” Johnson replied, “but there still is that risk of cross contamination.”

Special cleaning protocols are followed to treat school lunch tables where a student may have dined on foods containing nut products.

“However, say for example a child who had a peanut butter sandwich for lunch goes to the computer lab and is on the keyboard and leaves residue on a keyboard,” Johnson said.

“That lab is busy all day long, and a child will likely visit it that is allergic and that residual exposure can be enough to cause a reaction.”

The goal of the committee initially was to limit the scope of the policy to the district’s youngest students, who attend Austin Elementary.

“However, in the last meeting, the committee’s perspective changed on that,” Johnson said.

“The hard part was trying to determine where that age happens where kids become responsible,” said Matthew

Krell, MD, a pediatrician with the Vermillion Medical Clinic who also serves on the allergen study committee. “A fifth-grader is probably old enough to identify that he or she has this allergy, but where is the second-grader who just gets sent to Jolley?”

Kids of that age, Krell said, likely may not fully be aware of all foods that may contain nut products. “That where was some of the determination came in to involve both elementary schools,” he said.

School staff will provide approved snack lists to parents, and only approved snacks will be allowed in classrooms. The policy suggests that families provide a non-food item for the classroom for student birthday celebrations rather than treats.

Krell noted that the committee decided it was more realistic to designate Austin and Jolley schools as “peanut safe” rather than “peanut free” after studying allergen policies in other school districts.

“There’s going to be times when peanuts get in,” he said. “In the best case scenario, where you are watching everybody, there are going to be times where it gets in. The idea is try to create an environment for those kids who are most at risk in which we’re decreasing that risk.”
