

USD Golden Key will walk for babies' health

By Travis Gulbrandson

USD's Golden Key International Honour Society has made healthy babies the focus of its annual philanthropy event.

Golden Key will be participating in the March of Dimes' March for Babies Walk, which is being held at 9 a.m. in Sioux City on Saturday, April 27.

"It's to help premature babies, and it raises funds for the equipment they would need," said Golden Key member Jordyn Larson.

Larson was on hand Friday afternoon at a table set up in the Muenster University Center, where Golden Key members have been talking to students about the event at least three times a week for the past month.

It gives members a good chance for both promotion and fundraising, she said.

"I had a few people when I tabled last who were tabling next to me, and they took a few (fliers) and said they were going to ask some friends if they wanted to do the walk with them," Larson said. "We're pretty much just spreading the word."

In addition to meeting people face-to-face, the group also is collecting donations via the Web site, http://www.marchforbabies.org/team/t1979565, and through its campus mailbox, which is located in Dakota Hall 210.

The chapter has a fundraising goal of $3,000. Golden Key has more than 400 chapters at colleges and universities around the world, and is committed to a high standard of scholastic achievement, and an ethos of integrity, innovation, respect, collaboration and diversity.

Another local project with which Golden Key has been involved is Dance Marathon.

A first-year USD student from Minnesota, Larson has been a member of Golden Key since November.

"You have to be in the top 15 percent of your class, either in high school or college, and you are asked if you want to join," she said.

At the beginning of the next school year, Larson will become the local chapter's vice president.

"I'm looking forward to getting a lot more leadership, and also helping with the service projects," she said. "I was the events leader for Dance Marathon, so I got a good hand into how things work and how you have to organize them.

"It was really nice that it was a bigger event where a lot of people come," she said.

Larson encourages other eligible students to join Golden Key if they get the opportunity.

"It opens up a lot of opportunities for people," she said.

The opportunity to participate in Saturday's walk is still open, with registration ending on Friday.

"We would like to have people registered by the day before, because we'll be leaving early in the morning," Larson said. "Sooner is better than later."

Registration can take place either online or at the Golden Key table in the MUC.

SD Oral History Center has new home

By Travis Gulbrandson travis.gulbrandson@plaintalk.net

The South Dakota Oral History Center has a new home. It was announced earlier this month that the center's thousands of recorded interviews will be housed at the I.D. Weeks Library on the campus of the University of South Dakota.

"We really do intend and see the future for the Oral History Center as being an active research center, that it will be a distinct entity within Archives & Special Collections," said Dean of Libraries Dan Daily.

"The collections aren't going to just become archival collections," he said. "Certainly, the interviews are archival collections, but we'll be working closely with the relevant academic departments to continue collecting interviews."

The South Dakota Oral History Center consists of interviews dating back to the 1950s that document the experience of area people.

'Some of the interviews, the stories they capture date back to around 1890, the time of the first Wounded Knee, essentially," Daily said.

Indeed, approximately half of the interviews capture the memories of American Indians, and the collection itself currently is housed in Dakota Hall as part of the Institute of American Studies.

"It has had an identity tied to American Indian Studies at USD, and as we were having to work through this decision, that was a point that I raised and other people raised, as well," Daily said. "Moving into the library, even though we're not trying to diminish that in any way, it is a change, and I think that change has kind of caught people's attention."

From an administrative standpoint, the collection will move from the College of Arts & Sciences to University Libraries effective July 2013.

"As to when it actually moves to ID Weeks Library, that question has not been settled yet," Daily said. "The university is in a campus master planning process right now, and we're going to take information out of that process and use it in the decision-making about when and where to relocate the Oral History Center."

There is no timeline as to when the physical move will take place, he said.

Work currently is taking place with the actual recordings, with the transferring of the analog recordings to a digital format for the past three years, utilizing a federal earmark.

"The actual process is realtime transfer, so if there's an hour recording, it takes an hour, plus a little bit of setup time to move that analog recording into a digital file," Daily said. "Then there's what we call metadata that is captured with that some of the technical specifications, what kind of file format it was transferred to, information like that.

"The cataloguing really entails a brief description of the interview on tags or subject headings that will help people find these interviews in national catalogues," he said. "Library staff has been involved in that process, has been working with the oral history staff about the last two years in that work particularly."

That federal funding will run in June, leaving more than 1,200 recordings yet to transfer.

Daily said there are plans to hire a full-time staff member to work with the Oral History Center, and that library staff will continue to work preserving and cataloguing the archives.

"Having at least one fulltime staff member is really key to the stability of the Oral History Center on a couple different counts," he said. "One, there's work to do yet. There's still more organization to do, more cataloguing to do, certainly outreach so the people know that these collections are here and that they're being used."

A full-time staff member also could be beneficial in securing more grant funding.

"Grant agencies want to see that an institution is investing in its own resources," Daily said. "They want to see that there's a way to sustain whatever they fund."

The South Dakota Oral History Center includes six collections of recordings:

•The American Indian Research Project, begun in 1967 and containing recordings of Native Americans from the Northern Plains.

•The South Dakota Oral History Project, featuring recordings from every county in South Dakota on a broad range of topics.

•The Stanislaus Maudlin Collection, recordings by Father Stanislaus Maudlin of the Blue Cloud Abbev.

•The John S. Painter Collection, recordings collected between the 1950s and the 1980s.

• The James Emery Collection, including Native American music, dating back to the early 1950s.

"With all six of those collections, the range of users includes USD students, USD faculty and people who are external to the university, and in some cases are people who are descendants of people who were interviewed," Daily said. "I anticipate that same kind of pattern of uses is going to continue into the future."
