

Neyhart chosen to head SDAS

South Dakota Advocacy Services (SDAS) Board of Directors is proud to announce that Timothy E. Neyhart has been selected the executive director position that will be vacated by the retiring Robert J. Kean.

Neyhart comes to the position with more than 25 years of experience in the disability field.

SDAS is South Dakota's designated protection and advocacy (P&A) system. P&As are mandated under various federal statutes to provide a variety of advocacy services to eligible persons with disabilities.

These services are provided through a variety of activities including individual representation, educating policy makers, advocacy for groups, information and referral services, rights education and self-advocacy training.

Neyhart will oversee the 19 person agency staff and work closely with the Board of Directors.

"Neyhart will serve well in the many challenging arenas for the agency," Kean said.

Neyhart is a native of South Dakota and graduated from Northern State University in Aberdeen in 1984 with a BS in Secondary Education. His entire professional career has involved working with private non-profit human services agencies. He joined SDAS in 1990 and has advanced from case advocate to program director and now executive director.

He has presented at state and national conferences and in 1998 received the Distinguished Service Award from the Governor's Committee on Employment of People with Disabilities.

Neyhart said he is humbled and honored to be selected as the next executive director.

"This agency has been very successful since its inception in 1977 and it is my intent to maintain the dedication and high standards. No immediate changes are expected in agency program and administration," said Neyhart.

Neyhart will assume his new duties on June 16.

"The idea of being surrounded by music and of performing was something we all grew up with," Geoff said. "For most of us, the singing was in the (United) Congregational Church and Jack Noble was the organist and choir master. It really had an influence on all of us."

Robert Colvin was born in Sioux City, IA, and spent the first part of his life in Vermillion, where he grew up, attended USD, and owned The Broadcaster Press, which his father, Bob Sr., had started. Then, at age 35 and with four children, he decided to sell the business, return to school, and change his life's direction.

Geoff said his father, who had studied journalism for three years but had not received his degree before taking over publishing duties at The Broadcaster Press, decided to study psychology.

"As far as I can recall, he sold the business, and then devoted himself full-time to school," Geoff said.

Bob spent the second half of his career on the faculty of the Southern Illinois University School of Medicine, of which he was a founder, in Carbondale, IL.

According to his obituary, he was one of the school's most popular professors, adored by students who were grateful for the humor and energy he brought to lectures. He had previously earned his master's and Ph.D. degrees in clinical psychology at SIU. After his retirement, Bob and his wife, Barbara, moved to Austin in 1997.

Today, Geoff is a senior editor at Fortune Magazine in New York City. As he remembers his father, he can't help but also recall his childhood in Vermillion.

"I strongly believe it was the greatest place to grow up. As a kid, you spend almost all of your entire life outdoors, and those were the days when nobody worried too much about you," he said. "With my friends, we just ranged all over town, doing what we wanted, getting only into minor trouble, not major trouble - I loved all of it."

Geoff said he spent a lot of time at the old municipal golf course, where his father, who was an avid golfer, began teaching him the sport when he was 6 years old.

The Broadcaster Press also was one of his favorite Vermillion hangouts.

"This was the era of hot lead, and I remember those machines and the molten lead," he said. "I would just visit and talk to the folks who were working... I have to say I loved to visit, I loved to see how the work was done - how all of the ads would come in and be photographed under these incredibly bright lights."

"I remember when my father got a big, big offset press. It was big for 1964," Geoff said, "and that was a major day when that got brought into the building."

To say that Bob Colvin lived a full life perhaps is an understatement, as his obituary notes his many passions and accomplishments.

He built a canoe, a cabin cruiser that he kept on Lewis and Clark Lake, a vacation home in the mountains of New Mexico, and furniture that fills his home and the homes of his children. He published a book and many scholarly articles.

He was an avid pheasant hunter and an enthusiastic swimmer, handball player, cyclist, skier, and sailor. He became a licensed pilot at Harold Davidson Field in Vermillion and served in the Air Force and the Army.

In addition to his wife of 61 years, Barbara J. (Croson) Colvin, Bob's survivors include their four children, Geoff Colvin, Shawn Colvin, Kay Colvin (husband Davis McLarty), and Clay Colvin, and five grandchildren, Cristian and Grayson Colvin; Callie Erwin; and Grace and Frances McLarty.

He is survived also by his sister, Susan Olson (husband Henk Goeyenbier), many brothers- and sisters-in-law, nieces, and nephews. He was pre-deceased by his parents, Robert H. Colvin Sr. and Grace Colvin.

A memorial service will be held Monday, April 14, at 11 a.m. at the Zilker Clubhouse in Austin.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Bob's honor to the Alzheimer's Foundation of America, 322 Eighth Avenue, 7th floor, New York, NY 10001.
