Meet Phyllis Packard

By Travis Gulbrandson
travis.gulbrandson@plaintalk.net

Many area residents know Phyllis Packard through her work with the city and county.

For 17 years, she served as solid waste management director for the cities of Vermillion and Yankton, and currently is serving on the Clay County Commission.

But since the mid-1960s, one of her primary passions has been working with wool – spinning it into yarn, knitting and weaving.

It was a love she shared with people statewide when she toured with the South Dakota Artists in Schools & Communities program before she went to work for the city.

“I toured everything from kindergartens to senior citizens centers,” Packard said. “Those were lots and lots of fun.”

Sponsored through grant funding, the program sent artists to locations throughout the state to teach students and citizens about their specific craft – and depending on the length of time spent in a community, assist with a project.

“It was everything from a day, a week, a month, to six months in Winner, SD,” she said.

One of Packard’s most memorable stops was at the Mike Durfee State Prison in Springfield.

“That was fascinating,” she said. “They had a program called the Black Sheep Weavers – the inmates named it. ... They were weaving tapestries.”

Packard added that she hopes to take up teaching again, with spinning classes tentatively scheduled for Thursday afternoons, beginning in mid-January.

Further information can be acquired by calling LumoStudios & Gallery at 624-9222.

After her time with the Artists in Schools program ended, she went to work for the city.

Upon her retirement, she decided to continue serving the public as a county commissioner.

“I just felt that there were things I could offer as a county commissioner,” Packard said.

“(I wanted) to keep my hand in on a much smaller level, and not the day-to-day working. And it has turned out very well. I have enjoyed – and do enjoy – being on the commission.”

Although she was born in Massachusetts and spent time on the West Coast, as well, Packard said she is glad she decided to make Vermillion her home.

There are a few things she does miss, however.

“I miss the ocean and I miss having lobster at my beck and call,” she said. “I was in Hy-Vee a couple weeks ago, and the fellow asked if there was anything else he could get me. I said, ‘Yeah, lobster.’ ...

“Other than that, Vermillion has been very good to us,” she said.
