I've taught both band and choir at Elk Point-Jefferson."

She also has put in a stint as middle school band and choral director for the Dakota Valley School District.

She decided to stop teaching on a full-time basis to devote more time to family. This fall, however, with the Schuhs' youngest turning 8-years-old, Mary decided it was time to pursue the music position available at St. Agnes School.

"I saw the job listed in the paper, and I applied. It is a great school," she said.

Mary said she knows that the last couple weeks, filled with several dress rehearsals to make sure the kids were fully prepared, meant a lot of extra work for the St. Agnes teaching staff.

"They just moved things around so that the rehearsals would fit in with their class schedules," she said, "and that's really hard for them (the teachers). They don't act like it is hard, but I really think it is, and it is so great that they are so supportive.

"The teachers know that this is important, and they know that the kids wanted to do a good job," Mary said. "So, it was a total team effort."

She loves working with the growing number of young students attending St. Agnes School.

"They just have so much energy, and they are so positive," Mary said. "It just uplifts you, and they work so hard for you to be sure to put on a good performance. It is all about them."
