feel will be the fact that the market will always chose the most inexpensive generation to run. We have the opportunity to sell more power into the system than we have had in the past. On the other hand you can be assured the market is always choosing the least expensive power in the market. We think overall it will be a benefit to MRES members."

She added that they also believe there will be greater reliability and protection against system-wide outages. That is because there is a bigger pool of resources in the market that we can immediately draw on. There is also a larger network of transmission facilities they are not just relying on the IS.

received the National Federation Officials Association National Distinguished Contributor Award in 1995 and the NFOA active Track and Field Official Award for S.D. in 1991. Named the B'nai B'rith Sioux Falls Sportsman of the Year in 1995, he has received the Dan Lennon Award (USD), the Milt and Clara Harvey Award (Augustana) and the Steve Withorne Memorial Award (officiating). He was named to the Sioux Falls Public Schools Appreciation Hall of Fame in 2007.

Joe Trudeau

A 1969 Jefferson High and USD graduate, Trudeau starred on one of the most famous prep football teams in state history. He started four years on a Jefferson team that went 35-1 with a 33-game win streak. As a junior, he scored 20 TDs and caught 28 passes for a team that outscored foes, 676-27. As senior he scored 13 TDs and caught 25 passes (for 560 yards) and blocked 10 punts. Jefferson beat Onida, 35-13, in a much-ballyhooed game for the mythical state title as a senior. As a senior in high school, Trudeau was all-state in football and basketball and placed second in both the low and high hurdles at state, helping the Blackhawks win the state Class B track title. As a junior, he was honorable mention College Interview," said Simmons. "We chose it because we wanted to do a duet and this was the first one we both really liked. We found it very funny. There is a lot of timing and blocking, trying to decide when to move where and transition between things, memorizing lines. It ran about eight minutes. I really liked the scene where Brennan does a southern accent and shows up with drawings of cat people. It is really funny and he developed the character very well."

Begley said that each competition is run a bit differently but for the most they followed one style.

"Each Tournament has rounds of performers, so they will do three rounds of performing their piece at each tournament," she said "So, they get different judges and different small groupings of competitors at each round. From the three rounds, depending on how a judge ranked you, you may end up in a final round, as well. The state is run differently as they call it a festival. They don't rank the contestants they simply give them a superior or not superior.

They only perform their piece one time in front of three judges who watch them. If two out of three give them a superior, they get a superior medal."

Swanson said that their Reader's Theatre Group was fun to be a part of.

"We were in a readers theatre which is a piece that can have anywhere from 3-6 people; we had four people," she said. "One of the members of our group fell in love with the musical 'Heathers' and we adapted one of the songs from the musical into a speaking piece because we couldn't sing. It was fairly easy I would say because we were able to listen to the music and we were able to hear the inflections the character had before. The one who played Veronica was the one who chose the piece."

Moen said that she really enjoyed being a part of the group, as well.

"I have been to the state tournament before, this was my third year in Readers Theatre, so I kind of knew what to expect," she said. "But there are different judges and different pieces so it is fun to see. It was easier this year for me, just because I knew what the set up was. We were there to have fun with the piece."

Simmons said his impression of interp changed through the season.

"It is really fun," he said. "When I first heard about it, it sounded fancy, but it isn't as fancy as people make it out to be. It is fun when you get to practice. I like poetry and duet. I like seeing the snippets from other plays. If I saw something I liked I would want to explore it further."

Swenson said she was influenced by the seniors her freshman year, so she hopes that she was able to do the same now that she is in her final year.

"When I was a freshman there was a group of seniors who were really passionate about theatre and interp and it was really cool to see how far they took their talents," she said. "I have a passion for theatre, I have been doing it for a long time, so it seemed like the logical path for me to go. It sounded like fun and it was."

Moen added that the contests do push you out of your comfort zone.

"Oral Interp is not something I would have done naturally in my freshman year, but I decided to give it a chance," she said. "It is a great activity for people who don't want to be on stage. It allows you to practice in front of a smaller group and present to a smaller group without having to get up on stage. There are usually 7-8 people in the room. It is a fun activity to do if you want to try something different."

But never doubt it is hard work and does require a time commitment.

"I guess I would say it is hard work and does take you out of classes sometimes that you feel you need to be in, but, it is worth the work," Swenson said. "You will come away with memories from it. You will remember you took calculus but you won't have memories from it. In oral interp there are memories from it that you will be like 'Remember that one time in oral interp when we ...' So it is worth it in the end."

"Interp has always been the most horrifying performance for me because there are so few people around that you are performing to individuals that is terrifying to me. I am in most of the plays, sing and do solos and stuff, but interp has always been terrifying for me. Your hands get clammy but then you get up there and start and you know what you are doing and you start having fun with it."

As the season wrapped up, these six students represented VHS and each group earned superiors at state.

"I am not surprised," Begley said. "They all worked hard and put in the time to develop their pieces. They did a good job."

really seen her production climb this season. The sophomore center reached double figures for the third time in four games.

"Learning to play with each other has been a huge step for us," she said.

Because of the early margin — USD led 54-22 at halftime, for example — the starters could rest more than usual.

Senior Nicole Seekamp still finished with 18 points, 6 steals, 4 assists and 3 rebounds in 15 minutes, while senior Tia Hemiller (12) and junior Caitlin Duffy (11) also reached double figures.

"It shows that we have a lot of different players that can be weapons for us," Williams said.

Portland State, meanwhile, got 18 points from Kian McNair and shot 34 percent as a team.

Since an 0-3 start, USD has now won five in a row and has averaged 89 points over its last six games.

ELYSE BRIGHTMAN/VERMILLION PLAIN TALK

Senior Nicole Seekamp led the scoring for the University of South Dakota with 18 points in the Coyotes 103-61 win over Portland State in the DakotaDome Saturday afternoon.

Ask Williams if she feels like her squad has turned a corner and she'll tell you "not really," then point out that there are still improvements to be made.

"I feel like there's this steady climb more than really turned a corner," she said. "We're gradually getting better, but there's still a ton of growth for this team."

The Coyotes hit the road for a Tuesday game at San Jose State, but then return home to host Washington next Saturday.

Tre Burnette had 14 points and the go-ahead layup with 35 seconds left in the second overtime, lifting South Dakota to an 85-81 victory over Minnesota on Saturday afternoon.

Casey Kasperbauer led the Coyotes (5-3) with 17 points, making four free throws in the final 10 seconds to seal the biggest win for the program in seven years playing Division I.

Jordan Murphy had 19 points and 17 rebounds for the Gophers (5-3) for his second straight double-double, tying the game on a tip-in with 1 second left in regulation, but he later fouled out. Nate Mason, Minnesota's sophomore point guard, had 11 points but four turnovers without an assist.

Eric Robertson, one of four Minnesota natives on the South Dakota roster, hit the tying baseline jumper with 7 seconds left in the first overtime and finished with 16 points.

The Coyotes made clear from the start this was going to be a competitive game, taking a 35-29 lead at the break.

Shy McClelland made a layup off a slick spin dribble in the lane to make it 45-37, and with 11:58 remaining the Coyotes had their biggest advantage at 50-40 after the third 3-pointer of the afternoon by Kasperbauer off a rebound that Charles Buggs couldn't control for the home team.

The Gophers had a surge left in them, though, with 10 straight points to forge a tie. Startlingly similar to his game-saving maneuver that followed 70 seconds later, Murphy tipped in a miss with 1:11 remaining to make it 57-44.

Buggs threw a bad pass on the next Gophers possession that Robertson stole. McClelland was fouled on the other end before making both of his free throws for a two-point edge. Mason forced an off-balance, one-handed runner that bounced off the backboard, but Murphy was in perfect position for the tying tip-in.

Mason swished a 3-pointer early in the first overtime and Kevin Dorsey hit one too for a 67-61 lead, but the Coyotes snapped right back. Dorsey committed the costly turnover, a 5-second call while closely guarded on the wing, and Robertson answered on the other end to force the second extra session.

Mason hit another tying 3-pointer with 2:36 left, but with the Gophers trailing by one after Burnette's first basket of the second half Mason launched another long one with 11 seconds remaining when they could have played for the last shot.

Kasperbauer made four free throws after that to pad the lead pair of free throws for the Coyotes, sandwiched around a 1-for-2 at the line by Dorsey.

South Dakota's campus in Vermillion is a 300-mile drive from Williams Arena, despite being in a border state. Minnesota defeated South Dakota in all 13 previous contests on the court, but this was the first meeting since 1985 and only the second since 1967.

The Coyotes have beaten the Gophers in football, a 41-38 victory at Minnesota on Sept. 11, 2010.

South Dakota made the NCAA playoffs in each of its last five years in Division II before moving up to Division I in 2008. The Coyotes went 22-10 in 2009-10, but success has been harder to come by lately. They finished 17-16 last season, coach Craig Smith's first, for their first winning record since joining the Summit League in 2011.

all-state in football and won the high hurdles and was second in the low hurdles as Jefferson won the state track title. As a sophomore, he led Jefferson to a second place team finish by taking second in the high hurdles and third in the low hurdles. From his standout prep career, Trudeau moved on to USD, where he was a standout in football and track. A two-time all-North Central Conference tight end, Trudeau set the school record for receiving yards in a season (543 yards on 22 receptions) and set the record for longest TD reception (84 yards vs. Idaho State) as a junior. As a senior, he helped the Coyotes to the NCC title. In track, he placed second in the high hurdles in the NCC meet as a junior and third as a sophomore. He is a member of the USD Hall of Fame.

Tom Long

Long coached Rapid City high school wrestlers for 33 years — the first 13 at Rapid City High School and the last 20 at Rapid City Stevens. Perhaps best known for winning eight state titles during his tenure, he coached Olympian Randy Lewis to several national high school records. Lewis went on to win an Olympic gold medal in 1984. Long, who began his coaching career in 1956, was chosen national high school wrestling coach of the year in 1983. After retiring in 1989, he was named to the National High School Athletic Coaches Association's Hall of Fame in 2001.

Patricia Reisdorfer

A 1976 Adrian (Minn.) High graduate, Reisdorfer was the first woman inducted into the Augustana Athletic Hall of Fame (in 1990). She lettered in basketball, volleyball and track at Adrian. A walk-on, she won the first cross country meet she competed in at Augustana. In addition, she was Augustana's first female All-American in cross country, finishing 14th at the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (a forerunner of the NCAA) national meet in 1979 in Tallahassee, Fla. In track she set school records at 1,500, 3,000, 5,000 and 10,000 meters in 1980. The 10,000 time of 34:44 — still the school record — was set in Eugene, Ore., at the national meet, in which Reisdorfer was 11th overall and the top finisher among Division II runners. That time bettered her previous best, an all-time state collegiate record of 35:37 that she set at the ALAW Region 6 meet in Des Moines, Iowa. After college, she ran 12 marathons (including the 1987 Boston Marathon) and ran in numerous 5K/10K races.

Doug Schlepp

A 1970 Java High graduate, Schlepp had a stellar career at the South Dakota School of Mines, finishing as South Dakota's all-time leading men's collegiate basketball scorer with 2,440 points. And, what made it special was the 5-foot-11 guard set that mark before the advent of the three-point shot. He led the 1973 Hardrockers to their first ever appearance in the NAIA national tournament. At Mines, Schlepp still holds 13 school records, including points in a game (44) and free-throw percentage in a game (14 of 14), season (197) and career (61.7). He also holds the single-game assist record (18) and the season steal record (134). In his final three seasons, Schlepp averaged 24.3, 26.5 and 27.3 points a game. He earned honorable mention NAIA All-American honors in 1973 and was a third-team All-American in 1974. At Java, he was all-state in basketball while placing second in the high jump at the state meet.

Bob Olson

An Aberdeen Central and Northern State graduate, Olson played a central role in helping NSU succeed in athletics for almost 40 years. He was a standout basketball player for the Wolves after a great career at Aberdeen Central. As a four-year player for the legendary Bob Wachs, Olson built a reputation as one of the Wolves' best defensive players. He and his teammates compiled a 75-38 four-year record. Early in his coaching career, he coached the NSU women's basketball team to a 44-10 record in two seasons. He was named the NSU men's coach in 1985. In his 14 seasons in that position, Olson's teams were 305-129, won six conference titles and advanced to nine national tournaments, including two national championship games. Olson was named the national coach of the year once and the conference coach of year five times. He helped the school make the transition from NAIA to NCAA Division II. In 1999, Olson became the athletic director, serving NSU in that position for 13 years until he retired in 2012.
