G. Developers Agreement with Crystal L., Daniel L. and Jocelyn M. Robinson Regarding Construction of a Paved Driveway at Lot 11, Block 57, Snyder's Addition

Jose Dominguez, City Engineer, reported that the Code Enforcement Department had notified the property owners at 311 High Street in August about the need to register their rental property prior to occupancy. The owners were notified of several updates to the property that would be needed prior to occupancy. One of the requirements was for two paved parking pads along with a paved driveway from the property line to the parking pads. The two parking pads were completed but the paved driveway from the property line to the parking pads has not been completed. The agreement will allow the owners to utilize the rental with the understanding that a temporary driveway be constructed with the permanent paved driveway to be constructed prior to June 28, 2013. Jose noted that the agreement will be filed at the Register of Deeds. Discussion followed.

Students chosen for FARM program

The first group of medical students has been selected for participation in the University of South Dakota Sanford School of Medicine's Frontier And Rural Medicine (FARM) program.

The six participants have also been matched to their host communities, as follows: Milbank – Nicholas Kohles of Aberdeen; Moberidge – George Ceremuga of Rapid City; Parkston – Josh Doorn of Sioux Falls; Platte – Erin Rasmussen of Vermillion; and Winner – Heather Walker of Hartford.

"The Frontier and Rural Medicine selection committee was very impressed by the quality of applicants for the program. We are confident the communities will be impressed by these students as well," said Susan Anderson, M.D., director of the FARM program. "Further, we want to express our appreciation for the ongoing support of Gov. Daugaard, the South Dakota Board of Regents and the South Dakota State Legislature in this important new effort," she added.

The FARM program is a new initiative designed to combat the rural physician shortage by exposing students to the challenges and unique opportunities inherent in rural medicine. Beginning in the fall of 2014, the participants will spend nine intensive months in carefully selected host communities during their third year of medical school, working with local physicians and becoming immersed in the communities.

Rasmussen, first-year medical student, said she was eager to sign up for the FARM program.

"I am so honored and excited to have the opportunity to be a part of the program. Having been raised in Vermillion, which I consider to be a small community, I knew this program was for me," said Rasmussen. "I am excited to go into another small community and learn about medicine while also getting to know the people who live there."

Rasmussen, who majored in communication studies at USD, feels her undergraduate education will provide an important skill set to bear when it comes to interacting with a wide variety of patients.

"In every class within my major, I thought about how effective communication would help me deliver the best care to my patients," she said. "Even if I have all of the necessary medical training, if I can't communicate effectively with my patients, then I won't get very far in caring for them."

Equally excited for the program to get underway is Mark Burket, CEO of Platte Health Center Avera in Platte, SD, who hopes the FARM program will reinforce students' desire to practice rural medicine while challenging their perceptions about what is possible within the context of rural health care.

"When we have students here, they see our delivery model, our technology and our e-services, and they develop a greater comfort level with rural medicine and what we are able to do here," he said.

According to Anderson, the next step is for the FARM participants to visit their communities during the coming months and become acquainted with the people who live and work there.

SD State Fair receives 2 awards

The South Dakota State Fair was a 2012 recipient of two International Association of Fairs and Expos (IAFE) awards.

In the category for "Advertising Specialties/Merchandise/Souvenirs," the State Fair tied for second place with the Red River Valley Fair of North Dakota. The South Dakota State Fair also earned second place for the "Best Individual Social Media Idea or Effort," a creative social campaign featuring a T-shirt giveaway that required participation both online and offline.

"We have a lot of fun coming up with new promotions for Facebook and Twitter, so it's really an honor to know that some of them stand out," said Candi Hettinger, state fair marketing coordinator. "A huge thank you goes out to our followers in social media land. They really helped us earn this award."

The IAFE Annual Convention and Trade Show in Las Vegas, NV, draws attendees from state and provincial fairs, shows, exhibitions and expositions across the US and Canada. It serves as a prime occasion for recognizing the successes of IAFE members.

The recognition received by the State Fair in Huron was based on the fair's ability to stand out from similar fairs and expos in the same division. In IAFE's Division 2, the South Dakota State Fair was joined by event leaders with similar attendance statistics, such as the Antelope Valley Fair in California, the Walworth County Fair in Wisconsin and the Eastern Idaho State Fair.
