

POOL

From Page 02

Among the proposed features of the facility are various slides and a lazy river.

"The consultant feels that in looking at our trade area that we could draw some additional patrons to the facility when you combine it to the fact that some of our surrounding communities don't have a facility like this," Prescott said.

The consultant - Craig Roy of Water's Edge Aquatic Design - said a detailed financial analysis can be prepared for $3,000-$5,000.

The number of staff members is another concern. The current pool has a total of eight guards, while the 25-yard pool would require 16 guards on deck and four for rotation.

The 50-meter pool would need 20 on deck and five for rotation.

"It's a concern from that standpoint," Prescott said. "Right now, sometimes we have some challenges when we get to August to find enough individuals to work at the pool and staff it for the final two weeks of the season. So, regardless of the conceptual designs the council is in favor of, it is one of those concerns that we have because both designs are going to require more staffing."
