

screen TV, a bar and... an air conditioner. Called a Swamp Cooler, Ron says the unit can make all the difference when it gets hot. A custom bar and Adirondack chairs were made from the very same cedar trees most Nebraska farmers cuss at.

While it may be questionable where "home" is, it's clear that this space along the banks of the Mighty Mo is a favorite. "After spending three or four days here, you don't want to go to another home."

Rich and Lanette Hinckley bought their first camper 12 years ago. "It was such a little thing!" Lanette tells. Their latest model, a 35 foot Keystone Challenger, is 14 feet wide and weighs 11,000 pounds.

When not in the RV, Rich and Lanette have a traditional home in Yankton. Beautifully appointed inside and out, their stick built home has been featured with Yankton's annual Tour of Gardens and Tour of Homes.

Despite the fact that the RV is only a fraction of the size of the their home – 490 square feet compared to 3,200 - decorating the RV was just as important to them as decorating the home. And, as you can see from the pictures, living in an RV means having the comforts of a luxurious home, just on a reduced scale.

The inside is similar to the decorating style found at their home in Yankton, with warm colors, soft lighting and decorative accents. Lanette is resourceful in finding ways to add décor that works in a moving home. Wall art is attached with Velcro, or double sided tape to keep things in place.

The large kitchen island gives Lanette plenty of room to cook for the grandkids when they visit. Modern appliances in a black finish, beautiful countertops, double sink and warm oak cabinetry make this kitchen the envy of any home!

Both the bathroom and kitchen have oil-rubbed bronze fixtures, and are much more spacious than you would expect.

The main living area includes dining table and chairs, recliners, sofa and a desk area. The bedroom has a king size bed and plenty of storage room.

Outside, you'll find charming signage and lighting that can be easily put up, taken down and stored.
