MNRR tourism brings $9 million

A new National Park Service (NPS) report for 2011 shows that the 179,983 visitors to Missouri National Recreational River spent $9,061,000 in communities surrounding the park. This spending supported 147 jobs in the local area.

“Missouri National Recreational River is a wonderful place to experience two of the last remaining stretches of the free flowing Missouri River,” said Park Superintendent Steve Mietz. “We attract visitors from across the U.S. and around the world that come here to paddle, fish, bird and explore historic sites. It is truly a unique landscape. Our visitors experience the park and then spend time and money enjoying the services provided by our neighboring communities. The National Park Service is proud to have been entrusted with the care of America’s most treasured places and delighted that the visitors we welcome generate significant contributions to the local, state and national economy.”

The information on Missouri National

Recreational River is part of a peer-reviewed spending analysis of national park visitors across the country conducted by Michigan State University for the National Park Service. For 2011, that report shows $13 billion of direct spending by 279 million park visitors in communities within 60 miles of a national park. That visitor spending had a $30 billion impact on the entire U.S. economy and supported 252,000 jobs nationwide.

Most visitor spending supports jobs in lodging, food, and beverage service (63 percent) followed by recreation and entertainment (17 percent), other retail (11 percent), transportation and fuel (7 percent) and wholesale and manufacturing (2 percent).
