

■ NEUHARTH From Page 4

undergoing double knee replacement surgery," said granddaughter Dani Keusch. "He always told it like it was. Plain talk was his forte. He did it his way. In doing so, he paved the way for all of us (to do the same)."

Daughter Karina Neuharth said some of the most important lessons her father taught her were to be open-minded and accepting, as well as brave and selfless.

"He's everything that every human being wishes they could be and more. He did so much, and I know he will keep doing so much for everyone in this room, and everyone who loved him," she said.

Abbott seconded these comments, saying, "As we gather here today for this celebration of an extraordinary life, I am comforted by the fact that Al's spirit will remain in the hearts of every future USD student who reads The Volante, attends a class in the Al Neuharth Media Center, or grasps the meaning of the First Amendment after reading it perhaps for the first time on the letters attached to the building that bears his name.

"I am confident in the knowledge that the presence of Al's spirit at this celebration at this university, his university, we are all in good company," Abbott said.

The program concluded with another video message from Neuharth, where he admitted his family sometimes took a backseat to his career when he was younger.

"I put the family front and center for most of the winter (of my life)," he said. "You've met the members of that family who are here today, and now you understand why I love each of them so much. I kept on winning even after my body parts went weak and my mind followed."

Neuharth reminded everyone that life is not "an undefeated season."

"We must always play to win, but we will win some and we will lose some," he said. "When we win, we should share that joy with other. When we lose, we must accept the responsibility, pick ourselves up, dust ourselves off, try again."

"Failure is not failing," Neuharth said. "A free spirit can help us get the most out of life, any age, and under any circumstances. We simply must dream, dare, do."
