We are Better than the Worst Thing We Have Ever Done

"We are better than the worst thing we have ever done."

This is a phrase used by Sr. Helen Prejean who has walked with death row inmates for many years. I believe she is right in that we as citizens of South Dakota and as people of faith have a responsibility to begin to see our part in putting a human being to death through state sponsored executions. This is not to say that the horrible crimes committed are not devastating to the victim's families as well as the fear and shock that reverberate through society. Obviously the person committing murder deserves to have severe consequences for their behavior. Is not life in prison without parole a harsh enough consequence? Pope Francis in Oct. of 2014 said, "life in prison without parole is a hidden death penalty." He further said, "it is impossible to imagine that states today cannot make use of another means than capital punishment to defend people's lives from an unjust aggressor." (Oct. 23, 2014 meeting with representatives of the International Association of penal Law)

We have two choices here in South Dakota with regard to the death penalty. The first is revenge; kill a person who has killed. The second is healing and restoration of not only the victim's family but the person who committed the crime as well. When we act out of revenge, we lose the opportunity to restore our dignity as human beings and the ability to teach our children and grandchildren that the death penalty is wrong and by killing a human being, we all forfeit a piece or our own humanity.

On the other hand, when we help others to heal there is a healing that also takes place in us. "Do unto others" is an ancient rule of life and aren't we a people that want life?

We are better than the death penalty here in South Dakota. Let's stop this horrible practice. All life is sacred. Are we the people who will "cast the first stone?" We really are better than the worst thing we have ever done!
