

An Exhibit Of Remembrance

BY JANELLE CARLSON
For The Plain Talk

When many people think of war they, understandably, think of weapons. Yet the National Music Museum hopes to bring awareness to a much overlooked aspect of America's wars. The use and meaning of music in America's conflicts from the Revolutionary War to the recent war in Iraq will be highlighted in the museum's summer exhibit: "Banding Together: The American Soldier's Musical Arsenal".

The exhibit opens this Memorial Day and will showcase musical instruments have become synonymous combat weapons. For example, drums from the Civil War and bugles from WWI will be showcased. Yet Senior Curator and Associate Director Dr. Margaret Banks hopes to show what music meant to the soldiers of the different wars. She notes that music has been used to "energize and psyche soldiers up, as a means of motivating society, and more recently to relieve post-traumatic-stress disorder." It is the goal of the exhibit to showcase these aspects music in soldiers' lives. More specifically, "Our goal", she says, "is to let the soldiers speak for themselves."

It is in such a spirit that the exhibit includes pieces such as the violin carried by a Civil War soldier who carved his wife's name on it in a moment of deep homesickness or the guitar a soldier had made in Vietnam, because he was desperate for music. Beyond instruments the exhibit also features letters, poetry and posters from the various war fronts in an attempt to provide eyewitness accounts.

Indeed, it is such eyewitness accounts that truly create the exhibit. As this year marks the anniversary of many of the U.S.'s wars and conflicts the Museum hopes to provide a neutral platform to remember America's military past and the way music has always intersected with war. Dr. Margaret Banks desires that audiences make their own conclusions after letting the soldiers speak for themselves. This is an exhibit about "music and soldiers" at its heart.

After marriage he moved to the Yankton area and there ran an upholstery business for more than 25 years.

He also noted that he joined the Legion and took pride in being involved with the events they provided veterans.

A Legion Legacy

According to Legion Post 12 commander Fran Johnson, Kussman has been a member of Post 12 for 60 years.

"Me and two other guys had a nice award for him for 60 years in the American Legion, which is really something," he said. "It was a nice day. It was fun. When we were talking with him, he had tears in his eyes and thanked us for coming over. It is something to be very proud of."

Johnson said that many people don't realize the trauma that veterans have been through.

"The trauma those guys go through is just horrendous," Johnson said. "They saw things like their best friends being shot right next to them. I don't know how I would handle that. People need to have respect for these guys because they did lay it all on the line for us. If it wasn't for them I don't know where this country would be right now."

Johnson said Memorial

Day is our opportunity to say thank you.

"This is our opportunity to say thank you and remember the sacrifices they made," he said. "By going to the memorial services, or if you see someone wearing a service hat, stop, go over, shake their hand, and you will make their day. Anybody can walk up to a vet. Most of them will wear their caps with their service unit or a Legion, VFW hat. A simple thank you is immeasurable."

The Mehlhafs presented their concerns at the Oct. 6, 2014 City Council meeting at which time they were told they would need to seek a variance.

City engineer Jose Dominquez said that in his opinion the applicant did not meet any of the criteria for an ordinance variance to be granted and could set precedence for other properties in the community.

According to his research the main issue was one of public safety.

"There have been several studies that show that access points in general, and that their location, cause accidents and are dangerous to all forms of transportation," Dominquez said. "For a typical intersection there are 32 vehicle/vehicle conflict points and 24 vehicle/pedestrian conflict points. At the location where the proposed access point would be located there would be a total of 39 vehicle/vehicle conflict points and 10 vehicle/pedestrian conflict points. This is a 25 percent increase in vehicle/vehicle conflict points making the proposed configuration more dangerous than a typical intersection for the general public."

The issue he said was due to the distance from the intersection.

The Mehlhafs contented that the single driveway was creating an unsafe environment for their tenants in terms of access by emergency vehicles and noted that there had already been several points were tenants were not able to leave the parking lot due to the east end being blocked by other vehicles.

After public testimony was heard from the Mehlhafs, their attorney and a tenant at the complex, the City Council deliberated. Two votes were then held. The first, allowing the full access point was defeated by a vote of 3-6.

A compromise was proposed, which would allow a right turn only exit and entrance at the location. The Mehlhafs agreed they would work with this solution if the Council approved the motion. It passed 9-0.

"Our number one concern has always been for the safety of our tenants, especially in an emergency situation," the Mehlhafs stated in a letter given to the Plain Talk. "Our first choice would have been to have another full driveway access for this property. However, we are pleased with our City Council for their help in a unanimous vote for the solution they arrived at. We felt they listened to us and understood the unsafe hardship involved four our tenants and others when backing up over 200 feet to exit a single driveway."

Ordinance 1329 Passed

Ordinance 1329 was amended to declare snow and ice a nuisance, allowing city officials to fine any homeowner who doesn't comply with code on the same scale they would other nuisances such as grass or weeds.

Farrel Christensen said "Code compliance officers

which was determined to be valid and meet the 5 percent requirement of voters needed and was determined to be valid.

According to city manager John Prescott the decision of the voters will greatly affect the direction the council will take in regards to the Prentis Park Project.

"The current estimate of the project is that it will cost $5.25 million," Prescott said. "The council designated $1 million of reserves from the general fund, $1 million of the second penny fund reserves and estimated that we would need to seek a bond of $3 million to finance the project."

The city had hoped to place the bonds this summer with the assumption that the 5 percent malt beverage mark-up would be used to help cover the anticipated average annual debt service of $222,127.

A malt beverage mark-up is provided in state statute and allows a city to add up to 5 percent on cost and freight of malt beverages, which according to the last year of data available of 2007 would have generated $116,600 per year.

Prescott said that using the costs associated with malt beverages at the golf course, which the City manages, for one brand of beer an 18-pack has a cost of $12.40 or $0.69 per can. With the mark-up the cost for that can of beer would be $0.72, or three cents higher. For the most expensive bottled beer sold at the golf course, it would be equivalent to a six cent increase per bottle, which the providers would be required to capture in their sales costs. Likewise for keg costs, the most expensive keg would incur a six cent per glass increase.

During Monday's meeting it was noted that the public approved the 5 percent mark-up overwhelmingly.

Prescott said should the mark-up now be voted down by voters, it would force the city council to greatly reduce the plans for the Prentis Park Project.

Both petition votes could have been delayed until the next scheduled public election scheduled for June 2016. However, the council felt it was in the best interest of the City to set the election for the soonest possible date of June 30.
