Shirley Darlene Fox was born July 31, 1930 in Yankton, to John and Myrtle (Hoffman) Fox. She was the 10th of 12 children. She attended Sacred Heart School and Yankton Public School and graduated from Mount Marty High School in 1949. The summer after her freshman year in high school she worked with the Benedictine Sisters at Sacred Heart Hospital and felt drawn to religious life by their example. In the summer of 1948 she entered Sacred Heart Monastery. She became a novice in June, 1949 receiving the name, Jacqueline. She made her first monastic profession in 1950 and final profession in 1953.

S. Jacqueline ministered in health care for 50 years. She graduated from Sacred Heart School of Nursing, and later earned a BS degree in nursing from the College of St. Mary in Omaha, NE and a MA in nursing administration from the University of Iowa. She served as an RN, a nursing instructor and as director of nursing. She taught at Sacred Heart School of Nursing from 1953 to 1963. She then ministered at St. Thomas More Hospital and Progressive Care Center in Canon City, CO, and at area long term care facilities there for nearly 40 years.

She was honored as Employee of the Year in 1980 at St. Thomas More Hospital and as Nurse of the Year by District 21 of the Colorado Nurses Association. She retired to the monastery in 2002.

S. Jacqueline was known for her sense of humor, her compassion for the elderly, her love of reading, landscaping and of animals, especially her pet dogs.

S. Jacqueline is survived by her Benedictine community; one brother, Robert (Donna) of Sioux City, and several nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents, four brothers and six sisters.

Producers reminded to carefully dry corn during harvest

Steady rains this fall may cause problems for grain producers as harvest is delayed.

That's according to South Dakota State University agricultural and biosystems engineering associate professor Dick Nicolai, who reminds producers to review grain-drying procedures to ensure strong yields.

"The wet weather makes the possibility of a wet harvest season strong, and it poses an interesting challenge to farmers who may have relaxed their guard over the last few years when grain drying was not much of a problem," Nicolai said. "Many producers are considering some type of temporary or short-term storage."

Nicolai said that if drier weather develops, the possibility of corn harvested at safe storage moisture (15 percent or less) exists, but in-field indicators can tell producers to take additional steps.

"If we see stalk lodging or ear drop problems, the harvest timing will be more critical to save the crop, and on-farm drying will need careful consideration," said Nicolai. The basics of drying should be reviewed, just for sake of preparation this season."

Nicolai said yellow-dent corn should be dried until its moisture content is at or below 15 percent before it is placed in long-term storage. Short-term storage of corn with 18-percent moisture content can be safe, but temperature and moisture content will determine how many days it can be kept in this form of storage.

Nicolai said corn with 24-percent moisture content, temporarily stored at 60 degrees, only has an allowable storage time of 10 days.

Nicolai reminds producers that corn that contains broken kernels, fine material, seeds from weeds or other plants, and moldy kernels will spoil faster.

For more information on grain drying guidelines, ask for SDSU Extension Extra 1014 "Grain Drying Guidelines for a Wet Fall Harvest" at your count Extension office.
