

Cost Of Attendance Decision Looms For USD

BY JEREMY HOECK

jeremy.hoeck@yankton.net

North Dakota State's decision to offer full cost of attendance to student-athletes in every sport next year has already reverberated around the region.

Is such a decision at the University of South Dakota inevitable?

Yes, said athletic director David Herbst.

"We will do it," he said a couple hours after NDSU's announcement. "But we're probably not going to rush anything because of (Thursday)."

Scholarship support will be increased in baseball, men's golf and men's track & field to bring every NDSU program to the maximum number of allowable scholarship level.

Outside of the traditional tuition, fees, room, board and books, schools can now offer additional support for such things as academic related supplies, transportation and other expenses.

Eventually, Herbst and his counterparts in the Summit League will make a similar announcement, he said, but Thursday's news from Fargo won't rush a decision at USD. Patience is required until certain questions — namely, how to pay for it? — are answered.

"It's not going to change our timeline," Herbst said. "We're still looking at the best way to implement it."

During Summit League meetings, it was made rather clear that no school would be attempting full cost of attendance for the 2015-16 school year, Herbst said.

The only surprise Thursday?

"It doesn't surprise me they announced it, but probably one of the things that did surprise me is that they're the second FCS school that's done it across the board," Herbst said. Liberty was the first.

North Dakota State estimates that the additional cost will be up to $3,400 per full scholarship, and that the money will be raised through private donations.

While that certainly puts on onus on donors to step up to the plate, it's up to each individual school to determine just what that cost would be, Herbst said.

In advance that it would eventually offer full cost of attendance, USD estimated its own amount for the 2014-15 school year. That number was in the $4,100 neighborhood, but will figure to rise each year, Herbst said.

While the cost of attendance issue can present recruiting disadvantages for schools that don't offer it, that doesn't necessarily mean USD is suddenly behind the eight ball.

"We're not necessarily going to be knocking heads with Michigan or Texas in recruiting, but certainly against some of the same schools in the Missouri Valley," Herbst said.

"The last message you want to give you recruits is that we don't think enough of you to provide you cost of attendance," he added.

Eagle Riders Hold Area's First Salsa Contest

BY SARAH WETZEL
For the Plain Talk

Always looking for new ways to benefit the community around them, the Eagle Riders, part of the Eagles Club, held its' first annual Salsa (that is the dish and not the dance) Contest Saturday with good results for a first time around.

The event drew contestants from Vermillion and surrounding areas.

First place with a prize of $40 cash and a t-shirt went to Diane Nemeć of Holmberg.

Second place was given a flask set and a t-shirt. The second-place winner, Todd Brewer of Vermillion, entered the first salsa he ever made.

Third place went to Sandy Einrem of Springfield who was awarded a pizza hut gift card and t-shirt.

The Eagles collected 17 entries and welcomed 22 taste-testers who filled out ballots and voted for their top three favorite salsas.

"We went out to a Cinco de Mayo thing and they did a salsa competition," said Eagle Riders president Reda Brewer. "We just derived it from that and thought, 'Let's do that back home. No one's ever done something like that around here.' So we just decided to do a $5 entry per salsa and first prize will be cash so usually we try to keep 50 percent back for the charity and the other 50 percent will go back to the cash prizes."

Giving to charities is nothing new for the Eagles club.

"Generally every year we give to the Vermillion Food Pantry, we give to Coats for Kids, the backpack program and Heartland Humane," Brewer said. "So those are the main ones that we do every year. We've also done the Diabetes Research and the Vermillion Public Library. We try to give anywhere from three to six hundred dollars to each one. It depends on how much we bring in."

The salsa event was relaxed and casual, as winners were not required to be present and tasters came and went as desired.

"They just dropped the salsa off because we didn't require them to be present," Brewer said. "We were just talking about what we can do next year to make it a little bit bigger."

In the meantime, focus turns to the other events the Eagles club is hosting in the near future.

"We do have our summer raffle that's going on and our poker run which is pretty big," Brewer said.

"That's the one that brings in most of our money."

According to Brewer, the summer raffle this year includes a 55 inch TV, a camera and a Blu-ray player among other things.
